

Restoring Jackson State Forest will ...

- ♦ PROVIDE RECREATION AND INSPIRATION in a beautiful redwood forest
- ♦ HEAL WATERSHEDS that provide critical habitat for threatened salmon and steelhead runs
- ♦ CREATE A CONTIGUOUS WILDERNESS SANCTUARY for species dependent on mature redwood forests
- ♦ DEMONSTRATE TECHNIQUES needed to revitalize a logged redwood forest
- ♦ SUPPLY A LIVING LABORATORY for scientists, professionals and students

THE NEED FOR HEALTHY PUBLIC REDWOOD FOREST has increased enormously since Jackson State Forest was acquired in 1947 to demonstrate that second-growth redwood could be logged profitably. California's population has tripled, while open spaces have been consumed by suburban sprawl and forests destroyed by logging. People, plants, animals and fish would all benefit enormously from a restored Jackson State Redwood Forest.

Our Program

- ♦ TO RESTORE THE 50,000 ACRES of publicly owned Jackson State redwood timberland to an old-growth forest
- ♦ HALT CDF'S PLANS TO LOG the oldest, undisturbed timber stands and those parts of the forest most used by neighbors and the public
- ♦ CHANGE THE PRIORITY of Jackson State Forest from logging to restoration, habitat, recreation, and education
- ♦ INCREASE PUBLIC KNOWLEDGE and use of the forest through tours, educational materials, and conferences
- ♦ TAKE LEGAL ACTION: We filed a lawsuit in June 2000 to stop approval of new THPs in Jackson Forest until a current management plan, eight years overdue, is completed
